SECRETARY OF STATE DODGES POLITICAL ROW

Denies That He Ever Made Statement Anent Any Correspondence.

REFUSES TO DISCUSS AFFAIR

Explains Why He Chose the Southern Route on Way to Japan.

Secretary of State Philander C. Knox made a number of denials yesterday of reports from the Coast which have been received in Honolulu since his departure from Seattle on the cruiser Maryland. Especially in connection with the story that his name had been dragged into the campaign contribution controversy by the statement that Mr. Knox had said that Roosevelt wrote to George B. Cortelyou to return the $100,000 contribution of the Standard Oil Company in 1904, to "make the record good."

"I never made a statement regarding any correspondence between Mr. Roosevelt and Mr. Cortelyou," was the emphatic assertion by Secretary Knox yesterday. He added that as he had made no such statement he did not care to discuss the matter further at this time.

Explaining the reason of the southern course taken by the U. S. S. Maryland, he said:

"When I got to Seattle I asked Captain Ellicott which was the easier passage, the northern one or that by way of Honolulu, and when he said the southern course was the more comfortable I chose that one and the opportunity to see Honolulu. This is my first visit here and I am delighted with all I have seen and hope to see a great deal more of the Islands on my way home."

Up at Daylight.

The Maryland arrived off Diamond Head about five o'clock yesterday morning and Secretary Knox was up at daylight to catch the first glimpse of the wonderful scenery as the sun rose, and he stated later that he was well repaid for his trouble. By half-past seven o'clock the cruiser was tied up at the naval slip, having been saluted with seventeen guns in honor of the distinguished visitor she carried. Almost immediately the ceremonies of the

ROOSEVELT HITS FROM SHOULDER

Declares Penrose is Acting as Agent of Trust in His Attack.

BENNINGTON, Vermont, August 29.—(By Associated Press Cable)—Colonel Roosevelt today added a new feature to the sensational charges of corruption influence gained through contributions for "Big Business" to the Roosevelt campaign fund of 1904 when he declared that Senator Penrose, who is now leading the attacks against him, is the agent of the Standard Oil Company in these attacks and that the Penrose-Standard charges confirm his accusation of a hostile alliance.

Hawaii's Queen at Reception to Secretary and Mrs. Knox

Last of Island Monarchs and Representatives of the New Regime Meet to Welcome Secretary of State at Fete on Governor's Lawn.

Grouped on the great lanais of "Aracadia," Governor Walter F. Frear's hospitable home in Punahou, yesterday afternoon was a distinguished gathering representing the last royal line of Hawaii surrounded by the great names of the first Hawaiian Republic and by the official representatives of that greater Republic of which the Territory is now a component part.

Her former Majesty, Queen Liliuokalani, throned in one of the comfortable armchairs of the house, received the cordial greeting of Secretary and Mrs. Knox, of Rear Admiral Reynolds and Mr. Miller, chief of the division of Far Eastern affairs of the state department, and of many others, including Judge Sanford B. Dole, first President of Hawaii not to wield the power of the queen he had helped to dethrone.

The occasion was the garden party and the reception by Governor and Mrs. Frear in honor of Secretary and Mrs. Knox. When Queen Liliuokalani arrived accompanied by her chamberlain, Col. C. P. Iauken, Mrs. Holloway and Princess Kalamianole, in her automobile, she was escorted on the arm of Secretary Mott-Smith to the lanai, where she was first greeted. Secretary and Mrs. Knox were charmed by her Majesty and sat beside her for some time delighting her with their enthusiasm over the beauties of her beloved Honolulu.

Later the armchair was moved to the lawn, where, under the shade of a great tree, tea was served and the guests of the occasion paid their respects. Through it all ran a charming informal homage to the last queen ever to rule in this "Land of the Free," and no one seemed to enjoy or appreciate the reception more than did Her Majesty.

During the afternoon, between four and six o'clock, there was a continuous procession of automobiles on the broad roadway to "Aracadia," and beautifully gowned women, officers in uniform, representing the Army and Navy, and well-known citizens of Honolulu, were introduced to the guests of the day and afterwards mingled in informal friendliness on the lanais and lawn.

On a gorgeous Turkish rug spread on the grass beside the cement walk leading from the lawn to the lanai stood the receiving line, consisting of Governor Frear, Secretary Knox, Mrs. Knox, Mrs. Mott-Smith, Mr. Miller and Rear Admiral Reynolds. As the guests arrived they were introduced, each in turn to the hosts and guests of honor by Secretary E. A. Mott-Smith, who acted as master of ceremonies with such a grace and cheery spirit as to set all at their ease immediately.

The afternoon was cloudy, but although it rained slightly both before and after the reception, not a drop fell from the time the guests were first welcomed to that when they were greeted in their departure. The Royal Hawaiian Band, under a banyan tree, played sweet Hawaiian airs or appropriate national anthems during the afternoon.

Assisting in receiving and with the tea service, which was passed about by pretty little Japanese maids in national costume, were Mrs. B. F. Dillingham and Mrs. F. J. Lowrey.

Among the women who made the afternoon notable from a fashionable standpoint were Queen Liliuokalani, who wore a soft gown of black silk and who appeared very stately in this dignified costume.

Mrs. Frear was a charming figure in a clinging white gown.

Mrs. Knox was a dainty figure in white French embroidery.

Mrs. Mott-Smith was becomingly dressed in a soft white lingerie gown.

Princess Kalamianole was gowned in an exquisite creation of pale blue satin draped over Japanese embroidery in gold and colors.

Mrs. Walter Dillingham was effectively attired in pale blue chiffon over soft white cloth.

Mrs. B. F. Dillingham made a distinguished appearance in her gown of rich black lace.

Mrs. William E. Dargie of Oakland made a striking figure in royal blue. With this magnificent gown she wore a hat of gray and black moline and gray slippers.

Mrs. J. M. Dowsett wore one of the handsomest gowns at the reception. It was fashioned of black chiffon over gold lace, a combination which Mrs.

Dowsett wore effectively.

Mrs. Fred Wichman was pretty in a clinging frock of white lace.

Miss Edith Williams wore a stunning gown of bright pink over which cobwebby black lace was draped in a charming fashion. Wreaths of dainty pink buds further enhanced this smart frock.

Among the guests present were Mr. and Mrs. B. F. Dillingham, Mr. and Mrs. Walter Dillingham, Mr. and Mrs. Gerrit F. Wilder, Admiral and Mrs. Cowles and Miss Edith Cowles, Thomas Harrington, acting British consul; Miss Virginia Frear, Mr. and Mrs. F. J. Lowrey, Chief Justice Robertson, Professor M. M.
